Skin Trouble On Face.

Disfigured. Used One Cake Soap and Box Ointment.

"For several years I had been troubled with blackheads on my face, and on the top of my nose, and also big blisters which badly disfigured my features, besides the suffering from burning and itching. Some of the blackheads used to come out as pimples and after a few days would be blotched with white heads.

Others came in hard lumps.

"I found no relief until I used Cuticura.

I used one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Ointment when I was healed."

WASHINGTON

Alcide Poirer Rejoices that U. S. A. is in Big Fight for Liberty.

Mrs. Julia Martin has received the following letter from her nephew, Alcide Poirer, on active duty in France with the British expeditionary forces:

March 3, 1918.

Dear Aunt: It is with pleasure that I answer your most kind and welcome letter that I have received to-day. I was very glad to hear from you and to learn that you are all well. I am the same.

Well, auntie, I am very pleased to know that you are all taking that definite step to beat the Germans. Anyway we all know that the Stars and Stripes were always for liberty, so it is not surprising to see her coming in this struggle that is invading a great part of the world.

Well, as for the weather, it is not very good. It is a chilly climate and when in the trenches it makes one wish that he was staking hay in some part of America, where the sun roasts your neck.

I was on leave to England about a month ago and I had a delightful time, but not as it would have been if I'd been in the states, but we should worry.
One day this war will end and then we can make up in pleasure what we are now suffering by the hardships of war.

But we are always smiling as we see the Hun fall and retire. We see as we winning, and every day brings comfort.

Now I am sending you a field card to show you that I have not forgotten my duty towards the Almighty God. Would you please send it to mother, to let her know the same?

Well, I hope Willie will like the army, and I am very pleased to see that my cousin also is going to help to win the war, so please send him my address and tell him to write, so if he ever crosses to France I might meet him and, who knows, probably help him.

I am also sending you a piece of a photo. It is not good, but it is all I have and as soon as I have another I will forward it to you. I would be ever so pleased to have a photo of you me, but Mildred must, for she was quite a girl when I left you. I'm sure you would not know me, for I am quite a man now, quite able to defend myself every time I meet a Hun.

Good luck and best wishes to Uncle Will and all the family.

Alcide.

Dear Aunt: It is with great pleasure that I answer your most welcome letter, and I was ever so pleased to have your photo and card. It was ever so good of you to send them.

You ask me if I ever get my Manchester papers. I have not got any U.
S. A. papers since 1914, so you can guess I am pretty ignorant of any news of U. S. A. Well, you see nobody in Manchester thinks of me but mother. * * *

Well, I hope this war will soon be over, so that I can breathe the U. S. A. air again. There is not much news to tell you, but I wish you to know that I am ever so grateful to you for thinking of me, for you cannot guess how I appreciate any news of U. S. A.

Do you know these boys from Vermont, W. Demers, C. Dunham, Cap. J.
Roland? They are in the Vermont regiment.

Alcide.

AMERICANS ESCAPED TRAP

After Desperate Battle in the Luneville Sector

PATROL ATTACKED BY LARGE FORCE

While It Was Trying to Capture a German
Patrol

With the American army in France, June 3.—(By the Associated Press).— An American combat patrol engaged in a desperate fight with a larger enemy patrol near Ancerville in the Luneville sector, early to-day. The American losses were slight. The German casualties are not known.

The Americans discovered the German patrol and endeavored to surround and capture the enemy. During the fighting the Americans found themselves being surrounded by overwhelming numbers, but managed to extricate themselves and retire fighting all the while. It is believed certain that punishment was inflicted upon the enemy by the grenades and rifle fire of the Americans.

MAY TAKE BANDIT STRONGHOLD.

Government May Add It to the Yellowstone National Park.

Livingstone, Mont., June 4.—A bandit stronghold may be added to the Yellowstone National Park. The Jackson Hole country—once the resort of bad men of every class—is the strip which it is proposed to attach to the reservation.

For thirty years, Jackson's Hole has played an important part in lurid literature as well as in sensational fact.

Thousands of "wild west" stories have mentioned that bullet swept region, where criminals fled from posies and where a comparatively few men could hold a company of soldiers at bay.

Representative Mondell of Wyoming is fostering a measure to add about 60,000 acres of Wyoming public land south of the park to the Yellowstone reservation. There are very few homesteaders on this land and it is believed that their claims can be adjusted without difficulty.

The tract is as beautiful, it is said, as any part of the Yellowstone region and this is the leading reason for the desire to add it to the park. Lofty mountains, many of them covered with dense forests, rise from this land. Great prairies, which once were deserts, stretch for miles. Hundreds of striking buttes whose crannies furnish hiding places and fortifications for Indians, and robbers, and fugitives, dot the country.

Grand Teton mountain and Mount Moran are included in the proposed addition, but Jackson's Hole is perhaps the best known spot. Again and again, in pioneer days, Indians flashed into this depression and disappeared. Bad men learned the secrets of the Hole and often they got there a few horse jumps ahead of their pursuers. As late as 1914, the crazes echoed to the clatter of hoofs and the whine of bullets. On July 19, of that year, two bandits held up 15 Yellowstone park coaches and after robbing more than one hundred tourists, escaped to the Hole. Soldiers searched and searched and found nothing.

Now, Representative Mondell hopes to change the order of things. His plan provides that hotels be built where the red men once pitched their tepees; that comfortable lodges be erected among the crannies of the bandits and that the government shall see to it no tourist is held up—not even by hotel men.

BIG WAR RALLY HELD IN BARRE LAST EVENING

the prosecution of the war. Mr. Frattini told of the inception of the war chest in Syracuse, N. Y., and of its later adoption in many of the larger cities of the United States as well as in Vermont towns and cities. He spoke in particular of the war chest movement in Montpelier, where more than 1,800 others were represented in last week's Red Cross subscription of $5,000, while seven or eight citizens, he added, contributed the bulk of Montpelier's $4,700 subscription a year ago. The speaker also paid tribute to the Red Cross and called attention to the fact that its mission of mercy began in Italy with Italians as its sponsor.

Colonel Johnson addressed a Barre audience for the first time, but he made a distinct impression in his plea for the adoption of the war chest. He, too, stressed strongly the fact that contributions must be made wholeheartedly and by the wholesale if the war chest is to be a success. In a few words especially directed to the children, he urged them to subscribe, even though they contribute only pennies in the order that they contribute to the glorious work of winning the war.

The state director of the war stamp campaign, Fred A. Howland, was the next speaker, and while he did not speak at length, his remarks were fired with patriotism and his appeal for united action in the war chest campaign was warmly received. Mr. Howland dwelt at some length on the work which the Red Cross is doing, but spoke more in particular of the necessity of maintaining the morale of the soldiers who are fighting our battles over there. Italy and America, he said, are fighting for the same principles. Each had its war for liberation and in many ways the two nations are fighting a common cause.

People who remain at home have a paramount duty to perform in supplying the sinews with which the men at the front are to win our battles. The speaker urged mothers, sisters and sweethearts to write cheery letters to their fighting men in France and Italy and instantly a notable example of this was planned at home to do to the morale of an army.

There was a big audience of Italian-speaking people gathered about the bandstand, and the introduction of Attorney Franceschini was followed by an impulsive demonstration on their part. Attorney Franceschini spoke in fluent Italian, and his voice carried to the outskirts of the crowd. He was frequently interrupted by applause, but when the weight of his eloquence did not generate noisy enthusiasm, his audience followed him carefully. The speaker's gifts of oratory were revealed most advantageously as he told the story of Italy's splendid sacrifice in the war for democracy and ended by urging all Italian-speaking people to give their undivided support to the war chest.

He spoke in part as follows:

The year 1914 marked an era in human history of similar import to that of the French revolution. In that struggle was eliminated the privileges of nobility and the medieval conception of rights; now we are witnessing and are the actors in a struggle which is to decide whether liberty and equality among men or autocracy shall rule. History shows that throughout the centuries all was brought about better and more just conditions of living for the peoples of the world, and we shall never despair over the final outcome of the present struggle, because victory will be with the allies and on the side of liberty.

The militaristic class of Germany saw the handwriting on the wall, and they knew that their power was to be torn away from them by the ever increasing wave of democracy; hence for 40 years they prepared for the war, which, if the issue should be victory, would perpetuate the power in their hands and keep the masses satisfied with the laurels of victory and the spoils of the conquered peoples. They were preaching peace while preparing for war, and the killing of the archduke, Ferdinand, offered them the pretext for the conflagration. Had that not have happened, something else would have given a sufficient reason, because to tyrants there is no lack of opportunity of starting a quarrel.
